sigmund freud s collection of egyptian greek and roman antiquities is one of the art world s best kept secrets over a forty year period he amassed an extraordinary array of nearly three thousand statues vases reliefs busts rings and prints for freud

psychoanalysis and his art collection developed together in a symbiotic nourishing relationship each informing and enriching the other. Freud used myth to illustrate controversial theories like the Oedipus complex, situating ancient symbolism in a modern context. He explored the archaeology of the mind, unearthing his patients' dreams and memories while creating a personal museum of ancient treasure. Freud compared the process to analysis, where he cleared away material layer by layer to the technique of excavating a buried city to create a portrait of Freud the art collector. Janine Burke builds a vibrant, richly detailed and intimate image of his life and times, tracing Freud's taste for beautiful things back to his earliest years. The sphinx on the table is set against the glittering, decadent backdrop of fin de siècle Vienna, where an artistic flowering took place in painting, theater, writing, and architecture.

This book reveals how conflicting worldviews are at the root of public controversies on policy and trade issues. It highlights the particularly controversial disputes at the level of the World Trade Organization in the case of regulating beef hormones and GMOs, aiming to show how negotiators of international agreements, members of dispute settlement bodies, and policy makers in general could have recourse to concepts of other disciplines such as epistemology and philosophy in order to address deadlocked legal disputes. Ultimately, the book is a manifesto for independent and critical research.

The Robert Wichard Pohl letters, which are the basis of this book, have never before been translated or published. Pohl provides a rare personal account of life aboard a WWI airship. This was the first flight to exceed 100 hours and to prove that zeppelins were indeed capable of flying across the Atlantic Ocean.
